A bright sun and ice-covered landscape Thursday afternoon combined to give a dazzling wintertime sparkle to areas hit by Wednesday's snow and ice storm. A special filter and wide lens provided a whole new look to this creek and surrounding woods in northwest Pettis County.

Snow, freezing in Southeast; flood warnings for Northeast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A topsy-turvy weather pattern brought snow and freezing temperatures to much of the Southeast today and heavy rains and flash-flood warnings to the storm-weary Northeast.

Forecasters said that rivers and streams in New England and parts of New York were rising rapidly from the downpour that dropped nearly 2 inches of rain in some parts of the region. The heavy rain came on the heels of an snow and ice storm that knocked out heat and electricity to thousands in the area Monday.

The rain promised to slow efforts to return power to thousands still without it in Connecticut, hardest hit by the earlier storm.

Meanwhile, a storm that buried sections of the Midwest under foot-deep snows, pushed winter into the usually balmy Southeast. Snow of the one and two-inch variety were reported in sections of Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and the Carolinas.

In the usually mild San Antonio, Tex., thermometer dropped to 17, breaking a record set in 1937. In Texas' semitropical lower Rio Grande Valley, citrus growers eyed temperatures dropping into the upper 20s with alarm. Crop damage can be sustained if the temperature remains below 26 for more than five hours.

The Midwest was still digging out from a heavy storm Wednesday. Icy highways snarled traffic and caused hundreds of minor accidents in the St. Louis area. The thermometer plunged to zero overnight, following the city's fifth heaviest snowfall of the century.

Highway flooding was reported in New Jersey from the heavy rains. The rains, accompanied with mild temperatures, melted the snow and ice from the previous storm and heightened the flood threat to the Northeast.

Connecticut's Gov. Thomas Meskill said he planned to telephone President Nixon today to ask him to declare Connecticut a disaster area. Thousands in the state were still without electricity after Monday's ice storm knocked out service for 250,000 persons.

New Jersey was bracing for possible flooding, as heavy rain began to fall.

Freezing rain glazed highways in much of the Appalachian region Thursday night, and light snow and rain hit parts of Indiana, Kentucky, Alabama and Mississippi.

Energy controversy threatens start of Congressional recess

WASHINGTON (AP) — Controversy over the emergency energy bill threatened today to wipe out congressional hopes of beginning a month-long Christmas recess later in the day.

The threatened impasse over the energy bill developed after the Senate unanimously approved an 11 per cent Social Security benefit increase.

Republicans unhappy with the shape of the compromise energy bill threatened to delay action on the measure.

The Senate tentatively scheduled a meeting for 9 a.m. Saturday.

The emergency energy bill would give President Nixon a free hand to impose gasoline rationing. But it would give Congress 15 working days to veto other energy conservation proposals by the President, prompting threats that President Nixon would veto the measure.

Managers of the bill said they hoped it would pass and escape a presidential veto.

The Senate approved the Social Security increase 65 to 0 and sent it to the House, where final action was expected later in the day.

The Senate also completed congressional action on the final money bill of 1973, sending a $1.7 billion supplemental appropriation for scores of federal programs to the White House.

"We're in real trouble," Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said after a meeting with key members of both parties on the Social Security and energy bills.

He said Republican senators were threatening to delay action on the measure indefinitely.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., said, however, "I think there will be a solution before the day is out."

Earlier, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said the bill to fight the energy crisis was the only possible barrier to adjournment today.

"It all depends on the energy bill," Mansfield said. "I don't know what is going to happen there."

He said he foresaw no problem with the Social Security measure, noting that any opposition now will kill it.

The Senate spent more than an hour debating a $2 billion measure aimed at preserving seven financially ailing Northeast and Middlewest railroads before completing congressional action on it.

A roll-call vote of 45 to 16 sent it to the White House for President Nixon's signature.

The House, meanwhile, met briefly, completed congressional action on a bill to set up a program to combat child abuse and recessed to await Senate action on the Social Security and energy bills.

The compromise version of the energy bill would allow Congress to repeal administration fuel-saving powers within 15 legislative working days, and officials feared it could curb steps planned during the month-long recess.

The next session of Congress is scheduled to start Jan. 27.

Senate-House conferees broke a deadlock on Social Security Thursday, virtually assuring an 11 per cent increase for 30 million beneficiaries early next year.

The bill provides a 7 per cent boost in the March check due April 3 and a 4 per cent increase in the June check, accompanied by tax increases to finance the increase.

The Social Security and energy bills were the only two major measures still facing House action.

Both houses cleared defense and foreign aid appropriations bills, as well as measures to help Israel, increase federal flood insurance and overhaul manpower programs.

Energy legislation runs into roadblock

WASHINGTON (AP) — Emergency energy legislation ran into a Senate roadblock today which jeopardizes its chances for final passage before Congress adjourns.

"We're in real trouble," Senate Interior Committee Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said, as Democratic and Republican leaders huddled.

At the center of the delay is a section in the bill placing restrictions on excess profits earned by the petroleum industry as a result of fuel shortages. Republicans and senators from oil-producing states reportedly object to the proposal.

Senate-House conferees had reached a compromise on excess profits earlier today but Sen. Paul J. Fannin, R-Ariz., left the conference, calling the bill "absolutely impractical, unworkable" and vowed he would do everything he could to kill the bill.

The compromise finally reached this morning would give the President immediate power to set petroleum prices to avoid windfall prices but would delay for one year the consumer's right to seek refunds for excess prices charged during the energy crisis.

Then the measure must weather floor debates in both the Senate and House where a growing number of members are calling for its defeat.

If the bill passes and is signed by the President, voluntary energy conservation measures such as a proposal to limit gasoline sales to 10 gallons per customer and gas consumption to 10 gallons per week could be made mandatory.

However, the White House has indicated Nixon is prepared to veto the bill because Congress would have the power to repeal conservation measures, other than rationing, put into effect during the recession.

Energy chief William E. Simon said Thursday said the administration will make the 10-gallon limit on sales mandatory once Congress provides authorization.

He also said a decision will be made by New Year's Day on whether or not to ration gasoline. If it does come, the 10-gallons-per-week guideline could prove to be an appropriate standard, Simon said.

In other developments:

President Nixon indicated during a photo session that he may stay in Washington for the holidays to set an example. Photographers recording a Nixon-Simon meeting quoted the President as saying, "We're all going to stay up here and freeze. Someone has to set an example and I guess it's got to be me." But others present quoted the President as saying, "You guys can stay here and freeze."

The administration and the Air Line Pilots Association disagreed sharply on whether the nation's airlines will be allotted enough fuel to avoid service cutbacks in January. A spokesman for the pilots said the administration had agreed to avoid scheduled 10 per cent cutbacks but administration spokesman said no agreement had been reached.

A Gallup poll said 49 per cent of Americans favor current energy restrictions and 39 per cent believe the government has not taken tough enough action. The poll said 73 per cent of those questioned said they'd lowered the thermostat in their homes and 62 per cent said they were driving slower.

Venezuela's outgoing government said it was demanding royalty payments in petroleum rather than cash from foreign oil companies. It was not immediately known if this action would reduce the flow of badly needed Venezuelan oil to the United States.

The Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development said in Paris that skyrocketing prices of oil would cause the United States, Canada, Japan and Western Europe to spend $15 billion more on their oil imports in 1974 than in 1973. That same report said that if the Arabs do not relax their oil cutbacks and boycotts soon some Western nations may show an overall drop in output in 1974 for the first time in 30 years.

The coal industry released a report which said that if the government would lift price and pollution controls and guarantee an uninterrupted flow of supplies that it could increase production enough next year to ease pressure on oil-starved Eastern utilities before the year is out.

Israelis and Arabs sit at peace table

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The first Arab-Israeli peace conference in the 25-year existence of the Jewish state opened today with Henry A. Kissinger calling on the two sides "to break the shackles of the past and to create at last a new hope for the future."

Kissinger, the American secretary of state, spoke after Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko accused Israel of creating an intolerable situation in the Middle East and warned that "the Arab cause" had the full support of the Soviet Union. Kissinger and Gromyko are the conference cochairmen.

The historic conference opened 40 minutes late with the chief antagonists, Israel and Egypt, at opposite sides of a seven-table circle. A television hookup carried the opening session to all West European countries. Israel, Romania, Algeria and Tunisia, and the highlights were taped for broadcast in Eastern Europe. "We do not embark on these talks with false expectations," said Kissinger. "In the months ahead we will know success and I dare say we will know deadlock and perhaps despair."

"Let us all resolve here today that we will overcome hatred."

Gromyko warned that "the fire of war in the Middle East may flare up at any moment."

"Any delays in obtaining a settlement could be dangerous," he declared.

Egypt's foreign minister, Ismail Fahmy, indicated one of the deadlocks that Kissinger predicted. He insisted that Israel must pull back from all territory occupied during the 1967 Six Day War including Arab East Jerusalem. Israel has said repeatedly that it would not give up all the captured territory and that it would never seize in the 1948 war.

The opening session lasted for an hour and 25 minutes, then the conference took a three-hour lunch break.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban was to speak at the afternoon session.

Disputes over the seating arrangements and the order of speeches delayed the opening of the conference for 40 minutes. Israel objected to the unoccupied Syrian table serving as a "barrier" between the Jewish state and Jordan and Egypt. The tables were shifted so that the table was placed between the Soviet Union and Jordan.

After lunch, Eban told the conference that the October war confirmed Israel's view that permanent boundaries must be negotiated with utmost precision and care.

"Peacemakers do not reconstruct."

United Way campaign successful

The Sedalia-Pettis County United Way has reached its 1973-74 goal of $96,000, Robert Liston, campaign chairman, announced Friday.

While noting that final totals won't be available until later, "We do know we made it," Liston said. "We really squeaked it out."

Liston said this year's goal was obtained largely because local industries and employees increased their pledges over last year. Liston spoke at a luncheon at the Bothwell Hotel.

He said the Missouri Pacific shop employees tripled last year's pledges and Olin Conductor employees doubled their pledges of last year. Substantial pledge increases also were noted from Bell Telephone Co., Town and County Shoe Co., Lamy Manufacturing Co., Pittsburg Corning, ADCO, Paul Jensen Co., Duke Manufacturing Co., Rival Manufacturing Co. and Parkhurst Manufacturing Co.

Rival's corporate pledge of $2,000 was the largest single gift this year, he said.

Liston predicted that the industrial division total will exceed $50,000 in pledges, more than $5,400 than was received last year.

Leroy Luchs, United Way president, said the first successful campaign was six years ago and that the United Way has been successful five out of the last six campaigns. This year's drive began Sept. 15.

A full report of the campaign will be made to the United Way board at the next regular meeting in January.

Over the top

The $96,000 goal of the 1973-74 United Way campaign has been reached. Final tabulations by officials at Rival Mfg. Thursday indicated that Rival's corporate and employee pledges had pushed the campaign over the top.

Local gas stations plan no sales limit

A survey of five local gas stations Friday showed that none plan to put a 10-gallon limit on gasoline sales and purchases.

Federal energy chief William E. Simon Thursday asked motorists to voluntarily limit their gas purchases to 10 gallons and requested station operators to do likewise. But local service station owners said they thought the request was not directed at gasoline retailers.

Bob Lindsay, dealer at the Clark Service Station, 216 West Broadway, said he's selling "so much gas a day and then closing up." He added that he would be opposed to a move to restrict gas purchases to 10 gallons.

"Right now I'm closing about 5:30 every night," he said. "If it (limit) becomes mandatory, I'd have to be open five or six hours longer."

A spokesman for the Derby Service Station, North Highway 65, said he, too, is setting no limit on gas purchases and

Mary's role seen as model parent

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religious Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When modern mothers bewail the "generation gap" between them and their offspring, an Ohio priest suggests they consider the even more trying difficulties that existed for Mary in regard to her son, Jesus.

Like many present-day parents, she was baffled, shocked and bewildered at His conduct, says the Rev. Frank E. Fortkamp, but she persevered in her loyalty to him despite the problems.

That makes her a particularly appropriate "model for parents" in these times of strain between them and their young, Father Fortkamp says, and it offers parents a "consoling message" in this Christmas season marking Jesus' birth.

He "was the most radical leader who ever lived," attacking the "very roots of the society" and was a problem to Mary "as well as to His whole generation," says Father Fortkamp, of Mount Vernon, Ohio.

Writing in the U.S. Catholic, a national magazine published in Chicago by the Claretian Fathers, he says "some faulty commentaries have made Mary's role 'look easy,' but Scriptures makes plain it was otherwise."

"It is difficult to imagine the consternation of the law-abiding mother of Jesus when she heard reports of what her son was saying in public, and when she heard Him herself," Father Fortkamp says.

Indeed, the Gospels recount that she and other relatives became so alarmed that "they came to take charge of Him, saying, 'He is out of His mind,'" as Mark 3 puts it, but He persisted in His ministry.

Even at the outset, when the heavenly messenger informed Mary she was to bear a divine son, her "initial reaction was not joy but fear" and "lack of understanding" about what was happening to her, Father Fortkamp notes.

Again, when Jesus as a boy of 12 disappeared in Jerusalem, distraught parents spent three days looking for Him before finding Him at the Temple, only to be baffled at His response to them.

"Why were you looking for me?" He asked. "Did you not know that I must be busy with my Father's affairs?"

As Luke 2 observes, "they did not understand what He meant," but "His mother stored up all these things in her heart."

When Jesus began preaching, He became "the unwelcome prophet, the gadfly stinging the hypocrisy of the establishment" and He "antagonized the law-and-order authorities of His time," Father Fortkamp says.

"The revolutionary nature of what her son had to say was just as hard for Mary to grasp as for any one else."

Father Fortkamp says many church people today "have missed the full force of the impact Jesus had on His own times," and even for Mary, it took a "lifelong struggle to fully understand" the good news of the Gospel.

Mary, like everyone who personally heard and hears what Jesus had to say, had to struggle against all the tendencies of human nature to resist the truth," Father Fortkamp says.

"It is difficult to imagine the consternation of the law-abiding mother of Jesus when she heard reports of what her son was saying in public, and when she heard Him herself," Father Fortkamp says.

Indeed, the Gospels recount that she and other relatives became so alarmed that "they came to take charge of Him, saying, 'He is out of His mind,'" as Mark 3 puts it, but He persisted in His ministry.

Even at the outset, when the heavenly messenger informed Mary she was to bear a divine son, her "initial reaction was not joy but fear" and "lack of understanding" about what was happening to her, Father Fortkamp notes.

Dream come true

A 21-foot stainless steel church steeple will be shipped from the University of Wisconsin-Stout campus to the tiny community of Jordan Hill, Trinidad, some 4,000 miles away. There it will be placed on the town's only church. The spire is the dream of Bhano Rammattan, a graduate student at the university and also the builder of the church. He used the school's laboratory facilities to construct the steeple. When he goes home for the holidays, the spire will be crated and shipped. (UPI)

Operation of OATS is explained

The operation of the Older Adults Transportation Service (OATS) was explained to Sedalia Kiwanians at their meeting Thursday noon at the Bothwell Hotel.

Chuck Haley, OATS area supervisor, said OATS serves about 65 people in Sedalia and a total of 160 in Pettis County. To be eligible for the bus service persons must be 55 or over or be handicapped.

Haley said OATS provides local, "point-to-point" and excursion service in 84 Missouri counties. Haley serves 17 counties from his office in the Municipal Building.

OATS was established in September of 1971, and is funded by a diminishing three-year federal grant, said Haley.

Members must pay a small yearly fee and are charged a nominal cost per mile traveled, he said.

The speaker was introduced by Paul Edwards, who also had as his guest Councilman Carl Franklin, chairman of the local OATS committee.

By 1732, American whalers were sailing as far north as Greenland to bring back whale oil.

IRS monitoring state truck stops

ST. LOUIS (AP) — All truck stops along major highways in Missouri are being monitored for possible violations of Phase 4 petroleum regulations, the Internal Revenue Service said Thursday.

A. W. McCanless, district IRS director, said the monitoring system was expanded from checks at service stations and interstate truck stops because those checks showed about two-thirds of the stations in Missouri and Southern Illinois were not complying with the regulations.

McCanless said the violations included sales of petroleum products above the maximum price allowed and failure to post proper stickers on gasoline pumps listing the maximum price and octane grade.

He said a spot check of truck stops along interstate highways this week found one-third of the 123 stations in violation of the restrictions. McCanless said 22 of the truck stops agreed voluntarily to roll back prices.

The IRS also said that 23 of the 123 truck stops checked have started limiting the quantity of fuel sold. The limitations range from 20 to 100 gallons per customer, with prices ranging from 32.9 cents to 76.9 cents a gallon.

Gun, binoculars taken from store

Thieves made off with a revolver and two pair of binoculars sometime Thursday evening from the Cash Hardware store, 106 West Main, according to police.

Department manager James Bass, Smithton, told police that a .22 caliber revolver, valued at $80, and two pair of binoculars, worth $52.50 each, were found missing around 5:30 p.m. Thursday.

In other police news, vandals slashed a tire, valued at $55, on the car of Cheryl Harrison, 1009 Leone, sometime Thursday evening while the vehicle was parked at her home.

Detective Sgt. Perry Franklin said Friday morning that a stereo, worth $190, that had been taken from the home of Teretha Gay, 916 South Ohio, on Nov. 1 was recovered Friday morning. Franklin declined to say where or how he had recovered the stereo but said the investigation into the break-in was continuing and an arrest was expected in the near future.

Last tributes paid to Spanish premier

MADRID (AP) — With shouts of "Viva Franco and assassins to the wall" ringing over the heads of the funeral cortege, Spain paid its last tribute today to slain premier Luis Carrero Blanco.

Thousands of Spaniards jammed the funeral route as an army caisson drawn by six black horses carried the coffin of Carrero Blanco about 10 blocks before transferring the remains to a hearse.

Gen. Francisco Franco, who elevated the taciturn admiral to the second highest post in the land, did not attend because of an attack of flu. He was represented by Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, Spain's designated future king.

A 21-gun salute sounded as the funeral service ended and the coffin of the premier, slain with his bodyguard and his chauffeur Thursday when his car was blown apart, was carried from the government building.

Some wept as the military funeral procession made its way toward a cemetery 500 yards from Franco's residence, the assassinated premier's final resting spot.

A Madrid newspaper said police arrested a wounded 19-year-old youth believed to be one of three terrorists who assassinated Carrero Blanco. Police declined comment.

The bodies were found 15 miles east of the spot where the 10,051-ton ship is believed to have gone down. The bodies were floating within a 500-yard radius of each other, a spokesman said.

The search for the 13 crewmen still missing was continuing, the spokesman added. The crew was predominantly Taiwanese and Filipino.

The bodies, all wearing life jackets, were spotted by a United States Coast Guard Hercules search plane, which then directed the Coast Guard Cutter Boutwell to the area. There were no immediate identifications of the men.

Searchers also continued to look for the freighter's two remaining lifeboats.

The spokesman said it was extremely doubtful that anyone could have survived for long in the 30-foot waves and chilling waters of the North Pacific.

The Oriental Monarch, registered to Trans-Pacific Lines Inc. of Monrovia, Liberia, was out of Portland, Ore., bound for Japan with American grain. It sent out distress messages late Tuesday before it sank in wild seas 550 miles northwest of this Vancouver Island city.

Radioactive scare lasts 12 hours on Interstate 80

STROUDSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Traffic on Interstate 80 returned to normal today after a period of anxiety and detours that followed a collision involving a truck with a radioactive cargo.

The cobalt—which weighed only about two ounces—never posed a serious threat of contamination, authorities said, because the specially designed shipping containers remained intact.

The truck, carrying two extra heavy containers for cobalt 60, was one of several vehicles that crashed Thursday in thick fog near this northeastern Pennsylvania community.

But police and state safety officials took special precautions and sealed off a 20-mile section of the busy freeway. Police rerouted motorists around the site, about 10 miles west of here.

The blockage lasted about 12 hours until the cobalt containers were transferred late Thursday night to a different truck to be returned to Cleveland.

vulnerable, inflammatory situations," he said. "They try to correct them. Therefore there cannot be a return to the former armistice lines of 1949-67, which proved to be inherently fragile and which served as a temptation to an aggressive design of encirclement and blockade from which Israel broke out in 1967 after weeks of solitude and peril."

But he added: "We are ready for a territorial compromise which would serve the legitimate interests of all signatory states."

The afternoon session adjourned after less than an hour, and the delegates planned to reconvene Saturday for a closed session.

Gromyko said if any of the delegates wanted to bring up substantive issues they should be allowed to do so.

United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim presided at the ceremonial opening session and told the delegations there was no need to remind them "of the concern of the international community for the success of our deliberations."

Waldheim said their goal must be a "just and durable peace in the Middle East."

"None of us, I know, underestimates the difficulties of the talks ahead," he said. "But the very fact of this conference and the willingness of the governments concerned to respond to this new effort to find a just and lasting settlement is a source of encouragement and hope for all mankind."

The seven tables around the council chamber were assigned to Israel, Egypt, Jordan, Syria, the United States, the Soviet Union and the United Nations.

Jones is boycotting the conference, and its table was empty. But a correspondent in Geneva for Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported that Egypt, Jordan and Israel "later might be joined by other delegations, above all, the Syrian delegation."

Jones said that despite Bond's recommendation, "I still have no idea what the legislature will do with the appropriations committee of the House last week."

Bond's recommendation is only $27,000 less than was requested by the Fair.

The paper, Informaciones, attributing its information to informed sources, said the youth was shot in the cheek by police in a Madrid apartment.

It said he answered the description given to police of one of three young men who rented a cellar apartment near the scene of the explosion that killed the premier.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco, sick with the flu, met with Vice President Gerald R. Ford for 15 minutes at El Pardo Palace. But doctors urged Franco not to attend the funeral of Carrero Blanco later in the day, the Cifra news agency said.

The illness of the 81-year-old chief of state only a day after the assassination of his closest associate emphasized the uncertain state of Spain's political leadership. But although Franco has suffered mild illnesses at least twice earlier this year, his health is reported generally good for a man of his age.

Anti-Franco sources predicted a wave of arrests throughout the country and a crackdown on all opposition to the regime in the wake of the assassination of Adm. Carrero Blanco.

A 39-year-old Sedalia man, George Washington Taber, 1809 East Fifth, was found dead Friday morning, the victim of an apparent suicide.

Officer Ed Laird found the body lying under a tree in a vacant lot just west of Taber's house. Taber's wife, Eva, went to the police station Friday morning and said that her husband was missing and she had found blood in the house.

Det. Sgt. Perry Franklin said that a "church key" style can opener with blood on it had been found beside the bed in the house. Police theorize that the opener may have been used to inflict the neck wound that apparently killed Taber.

Franklin said that the body appeared to have been outside since some time Thursday night, but declined to estimate the time of death.

Franklin said that no suicide note had been found but said that there "is no reason at this time to believe it wasn't suicide."

Taber, an employee of the city sanitation department, has reportedly lived in Sedalia for about six years.

Deputy coroner Mike Matchael, who examined Taber's body, was not available for comment early Friday afternoon.

The body was taken to Ewing's Funeral Home where arrangements are incomplete.

The paper said that real earnings figures, or earnings adjusted to subtract the effects of inflation, declined in November.

Real average weekly earnings dropped five-tenths of one per cent. Over the year as a whole, real average weekly earnings were down 1.9 per cent.

Average weekly earnings were $147.60 gross.

The index rose to 137.6 of the 1967 base, meaning that it cost $13.76 to buy the same basket of goods in 1967.

The report was more bad news for the Nixon administration's inflation fighters, even though the administration is allowing fuel prices to go up to try to dampen consumption because of the shortage. The report showed that prices were rising in most other areas as well.

In the 12 months ending in November, the cost of living rose 8.4 per cent, the biggest 12-month increase since June 1951, the bureau said.

Although the Arab oil cutoff may have had some impact on fuel prices, economists believe the biggest price effect of the cutoff will be reflected when December Cost of Living figures are released a month from now.

However, gasoline and oil prices jumped 4.5 per cent in November, the largest one-month increase in these commodities since September of 1962, when they also rose 4.5 per cent. Fuel oil and coal prices jumped 10 per cent and gas and electricity costs, 1.2 per cent.

Most types of food bought in grocery stores except for meats, poultry and eggs, were up over October. Prices of cereals and bakery products alone rose five per cent.

The news was not only bad on the price

To recommend increase for Fair budget

State Fair Secretary Ron Jones said Friday that Gov. Christopher Bond will recommend a State Fair budget increase of $144,240 over what was recommended earlier by the State Budget Office.

Jones said this means that Bond's State Fair budget recommendation for fiscal 1974 will be $1,142,240 rather than $998,000.

Jones explained that the money was added to the Budget Office's original recommendation after he explained to Bond that a "procedural change" in the budget application resulted in the lower figure.

He said that in past years, the Fair secretary would request a special appropriation of $50,000 to $100,000 for planning future fairs. He said this year the special appropriation was not included in the regular budget request.

"Rather than ask for a separate item for the grant (special appropriation)," Jones said, "we included this in the regular appropriation and it wasn't picked up by the Budget Office. After I talked with the governor about this, he realized what had happened and restored this money."

Jones said that despite Bond's recommendation, "I still have no idea what the legislature will do with the appropriations committee of the House last week."

Bond's recommendation is only $27,000 less than was requested by the Fair.

A whole library of varied writings

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Various names have been applied to the old tome — the "Book of Books," the "Source-book of Life," the "Supreme Monument of Human Literature," the "Great Story," the "Good Book," "Holy Writ," "Sacred Scripture," the "Word of God," the "Bible."

"The best gift God has given to man," Abraham Lincoln said of it.

It's a strange compendium, both of profundity and simplicity, of universal meanings couched in specific events, of episodes in time flashed against a timeless screen of eternity. Unique among writings of world religions, it esteems history as the conduit of truth and as fundamental to mankind's destiny.

The contents also offer some rich and graphic reading, even to skeptics.

"Unquestionably it is the most beautiful book in the world," wrote the agnostic man of letters, H.L. Mencken. "No other literature, old or new, can offer a match for it."

Actually it is not just one book but many of them, a library of books, which is the meaning of the Greek word, "biblia," from which the name, Bible, was applied in the second century to the whole collection.

It includes books of history, of lush and lovely poetry, of dramas of human psychology, of tragedies and triumphs, biographies of the noble and the decadent, practical everyday maxims, short stories, romances, military chronicles, songs of aspiration and courage, mystical oracles, bristling exhortations, allegories, legends, laws and letters.

Yet, with all its diversity, a cohesive thread runs through it that all creation is a gift, that life is freely bestowed to be appreciated and nurtured in harmony with its Giver. That is the keynote, that mortals are not alone, that they exist through a greater Being than themselves, that they and the universe in all its endless variety, beauty and possibilities are beholden to a gracious God.

Through the Bible, that divine will unfolds among them, through their experiences, through their variable resistance or adherence to it, through action on the earth. The message is in happenings, in the tramp of events.

Like an orchestra, it draws on many, varying instruments. But like the structure of a symphony, it revolves around a central theme, the "why" of life, its generating essence and intent.

That basic purpose, as registered through Scripture in a thousand contexts and cadences, is the establishment of living mutuality between people, their Creator and each other to bind up the separate fragments of existence and make the partial living whole.

This is the Scriptural heartbeat, a call to love and its corollaries of justice and harmonious inter-enrichment. It looms as the motivating drive, the primary, most powerful building force and integrating goal of creation.

"Abide in my love . . . that your joy may be full," Jesus said as he finished a mission of utmost, self-giving love poured into the human bloodstream on that first Christmas.

That raison d'être, that clamant reason to be, pulses like an insistent chord throughout the multiplicity of the Bible, sometimes muted and distant, sometimes tenderly pleading, sometimes thunderous and incisive. Yet it steadily proclaims the divine attachment to people and seeks a responding implementation among them as the way of their full being.

An "everlasting love," the prophets described it, endowed on the world and its creatures and intended to radiate among them. "Hold fast to love."

To appreciate the significance and message of the Bible, however, demands some recognition of its nature, what it is and what it isn't.

Although it throbs with chronicles of men and nations, and while it is indispensable to students of ancient history, its objective is not simply to recite history, but to interpret its implications for humanity's final well-being.

Although it glows with passages of some of the most subtle literature of all times, as many an artistic critic has attested, its purpose is not to produce gems of lyric expression but to illuminate basic realities of life.

Although it is a treasure-trove of ethical wisdom and practical guides to living honorably and well, it sees these virtues not just in terms of individual expediency, but as affecting the entire order of existence and its future.

"Although it crackles with gripping narratives, its point is not simply to absorb attention but to bring out unchanging aspects of human behavior, of love, hate, loyalty, deceit, the facts of inter-relationships and their consequences.

It is not a textbook of science, astronomy or geology, analyzing the "how" of physical processes, but an exposition of "who" and "what for" lies behind them. Bible scholar William Barclay says to approach it as technical data is to "miss the very soul of the Bible."

It is a religious document, an affirmation of a necessarily surpassing source of the cosmos, of a purposefulness and loving logic put into it for humanity's growth in character, awareness and ultimate development.

Yet, despite frequent assertions to the contrary, it is not basically an account of "man's quest for God."

Its prime intent is "to show that no quest on man's part is possible except under God's prompting," says noted Scripture scholar George A. Buttrick. "Our search for him is quickened by his prior finding of us."

In that sense, he adds, the Bible "is a record of the self-revelation of God."

The arena of that revelation is human history. The unknown becomes known through events, through persons, through decisions and deeds. Unlike Greek and Oriental thought which sees everything as circular, an endless curving back on itself, the Bible views existence as linear, with a beginning, a middle, a final consummation.

History itself thus is invested with the highest importance and hope.

Scripture, however, is not all crisp and clear. Parts are baffling and difficult, reflecting the culture and concepts of remote times. There are obscure references and monotonous chronotopes that seem irrelevant except to specialists.

"There are high peaks and low valleys," says Scripture scholar Fred Gladstone Bratton.

Some Christians regard the Bible as verbally infallible, as if divinely dictated. Yet it contains seeming inconsistencies and its authors reflect their individual personalities and cultures, rather than being just passive instruments.

Nevertheless, they felt so driven by God's will that they often spoke for him. "The Lord says . . ." Their vision and their aspirations obviously were inspired, surpassing their times.

Some Christians also insist on the literal factuality of various accounts which others see as symbolic, such as those of Adam and Eve and Jonah being swallowed by a big fish. Whether or not cast in the pictorial imagery common to the Hebrews, it is the meanings that are of paramount importance.

Many people boggle at miraculous occurrences reported, but only a narrow rationalism would insist that any such departures from the natural order are impossible. Furthermore, the Bible does not deal mainly with the spectacular, but with inner proddings that awaken human conscience.

It also uses allegories and parables to convey truths not easily confined to flat journalistic prose, much as great paintings or music convey meanings that can't be captured in mere language.

The Bible consists of two major parts, the 39 books of Jewish Scripture — plus seven other Jewish writings included by Catholics — and 27 books of additional Scripture about Jesus.

Christians accept both as the progressive breakthroughs of truth as people were able to receive it, from primordial times onward, gropingly at first, often distortedly and grossly, but with gradually maturing clarity.

The two sections commonly are called the "Old Testament," a pejorative designation by Christianity and not by Judaism, which does not regard its Scriptures as old or superseded, and the "New Testament," espoused by Christians as the culminating revelation to human beings through one of them fully attuned to the divine way.

"And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us."

The term "Testament," as applied to Scriptures, means a

"covenant," or agreed working relationship, between two parties.

In Jewish Scriptures, the "covenant" is between God and the Jewish people to whom the promise of a national homeland is linked with their responsibility as a "chosen people" to be light-bearers on earth of one, monotheistic God of all creation.

History itself thus is invested with the highest importance and hope.

The term "Testament," as applied to Scriptures, means a chant insights of the prophets and various stories with a point.

The New Testament begins with the four gospels, meaning "good news." These are the four narratives of the life of Jesus by Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, which are followed by the Book of Acts, recounting experiences of the apostles. Then come the epistles, a collection of letters by disciples of Jesus and, at the end, the visionary Book of Revelation.

In the New Testament, the "covenant" is broadened through the work of the Jewish light-bearer, Jesus, to extend the promised blessings to those of every race who respond in trust. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only Son, that whoever believes in him should not perish but have eternal life."

The Jewish Scriptures begin with the Torah, the first five books sometimes called the Pentateuch, derived from "penta," Greek for five. These lay down the basic laws of creation and its divine origin, of Israel's beginning . . . glimpse of divine unity and concern in human affairs, the giving of the Ten Commandments after deliverance from Egyptian slavery.

Its secret is in its effect on people, from the uneducated to the keenest intellectuals. All sorts of them — convicts, professors, primitive tribesmen, war prisoners, businessmen, laborers — have recounted its dynamic operating power on them.

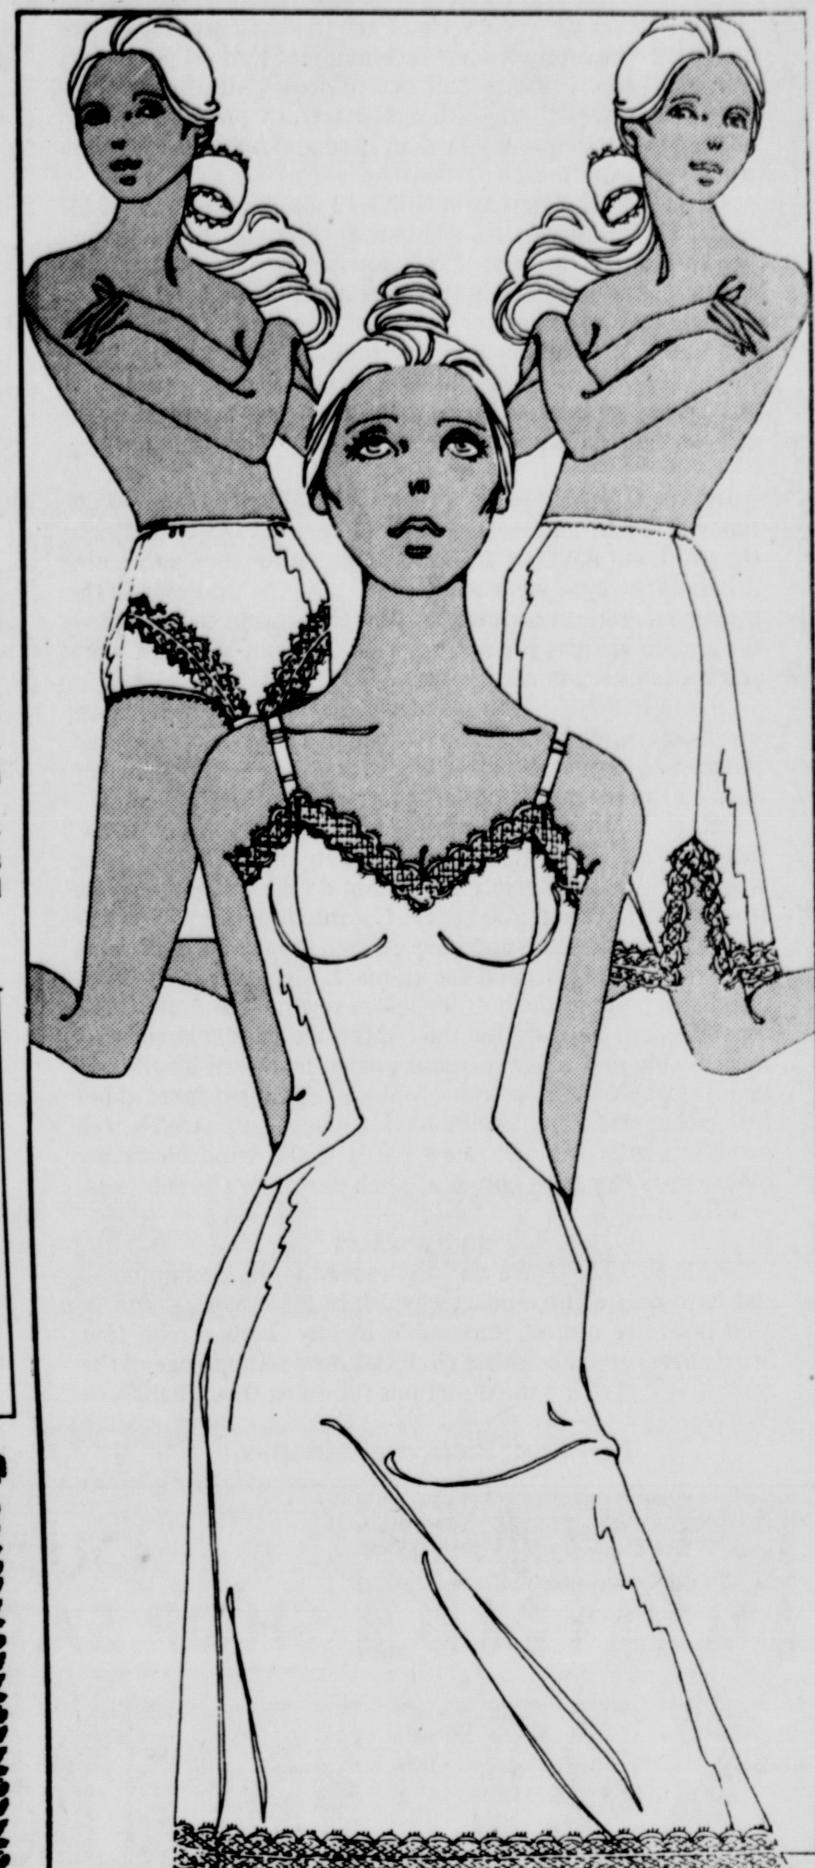

"For the word of God is living and active," Scripture puts it, "sharper than any two-edged sword."

Polly's pointersMobile home bed

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the makers of patterns. They do not seem to remember that fat people get pregnant, too. I need a half size in dress patterns and each time I get pregnant I find that all maternity patterns go from size 8 to 18 but try and adjust an 18 to a 20½ especially if you are not an experienced seamstress. — PAULETTE.

DEAR POLLY and Mrs. G.B. — I am a demonstrator for liquid embroidery paints and have found tubes I cannot start working again by using the following method. Two of the larger companies making these paints have changeable tubes and all they need is new tips. Get these by writing to the company. The address is on the tube. If she has some other brand she can soak the tips in a solvent for such paint and rub the tip quite vigorously with about four layers of nylon net. In most instances they will start working again. — SYLVIA.

DEAR POLLY — I am answering Mrs. G.B. whose 20 tubes of liquid embroidery paint have been stored and now the paint will not flow. I am an instructor for such paints and if hers is the type we use she could hold the tip down in the proper solvent, press down to allow the solvent to flow into a tip service kit and replace any tips that will not then work and her troubles should be over. — DOROTHY.

DEAR POLLY — To protect the inside of my cut glass vase from stains I place a plastic bag inside to hold water and the flower stems. The clear bag cannot be seen through the deep cuts in the design of the vase. — ANNE MAE.

DEAR POLLY — Several expectant mothers I know, including me, have made our maternity pants the following way. Buy those maternity panels but do not put them in the front as they are supposed to be. Cut into four pieces and sew one in each side seam and have enough for two pairs of pants that will not bind around the stomach. Be sure to trim each panel to a point at the bottom before sewing it in. Panty hose tops also can be used for this. Make the panels about four inches wide and taper to about twelve inches in length. My favorite way is only for knits. Make a self-fabric panel about five inches wide and twelve inches long. Knits stretch well and the pieces will not show easily if the wind blows my blouse up. After baby comes all such panels can be removed. — MRS. A.L.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — We recently moved into a mobile home and have only a three-quarter width bed. I find sheets to fit such beds are almost impossible to buy. I once read that fitted sheets could be made from flat ones so hope one of the readers will give me the directions for doing this. Thanks. — ELVA.

Several industrial queries

As of last Saturday, the city had received 21 inquiries from industrial prospects since economic development director Bill Hall resigned Aug. 31. Mayor Jerry Jones said Thursday.

Jones said he had discussed these figures with the City Council, which is considering whether to replace Hall.

Deborah Hopkins, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. T. J. Hopkins, 1506 West Broadway, has been elected corresponding secretary of Alpha Xi Delta sorority at Culver-Stockton College. It was announced recently. She will assume her duties at the start of the second semester.

Miss Hopkins, a junior criminal justice major, is treasurer of Associated Women's Students and is active in women's intramural athletics. She is a 1971 graduate of Smith-Cotton High School.

Mental health program is announced

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A $20.8 million program to combat mental retardation, especially through prenatal care, has been announced by Gov. Christopher S. Bond.

The program, to be administered through hospitals and doctors, to provide prenatal diagnosis and post-birth treatment of retarded children, would serve expectant mothers likely to have retarded babies and who could not afford medical care.

Bond said the program would apply to at least 5,000 Missouri mothers. It would be financed through federal revenue sharing money.

He called it the "highest priority for spending the available funds we have."

He stressed that he is talking about the situation "in this area at this time," but said he saw no reason to expect a curtailment of natural gas.

Asked about MPSC a letter sent to local natural gas users on Sept. 6 stating that cutbacks could occur, Savio said the letter was a precaution "in the event there is an insufficient supply." He said the letter was necessary to comply with Federal Power Commission regulations and did not reflect an imminent threat.

Savio pointed out that Cities Service Co., which supplies

SAVE - SAVE - SAVE

MUSIC CO.

Sedalia with natural gas, has given no indication of cutbacks. Panhandle Eastern, on the other hand, which supplies MPSC customers to the north, has cut back and has added no new customers since December 1970, he said.

The squirrel, it seems, slipped down Van Wagner's fireplace flue and quickly scurried to the front room, destined for points unknown.

Squirrel captured inside local home

Following a quick skirmish, the squirrel was cornered in a bathroom where exterminator Bill Jobe later took over. After capturing the animal in a special net, Jobe later released it outside.

"It's just lucky our dog didn't get wind of him," Van Wagner said. "That would have really been a scene!"

Ann Landers

Another writes about her virginity

Dear Ann Landers: Several months ago you asked girls who had given up their virginity to write and tell you how they felt about it. I couldn't bring myself to put my thoughts down on paper then, but I am ready now.

First, I'd like to say I didn't give in because "everybody was doing it." The girls I went to high school with weren't bragging — in fact, they were doing just the opposite. They were lying in their teeth, pretending they were "holdouts" when actually they were "put-outs."

I lost my virginity at 15 and now I feel rotten about it. My "true love" dropped my after string me along for nearly four years. The relationship is over and the pain is gone, but I still feel used. Now I am 20 and hurting from a second affair.

When you "mess around," as we used to call it, you lose a lot of respect for yourself, and that hurts worse than anything. You try to hold on to the guy by catering to his wishes, but it never works. By the time you figure out that a relationship based strictly on sex is no good, you're a loser no matter how you look at it.

I'm sure a lot of girls are saying, "That's HER, not ME. It's cool to do it if you feel like it, and if you really care about the guy it's not cheap or wrong."

O.K., girls, keep kidding yourselves. My best friend operated along those lines for years and she was just ditched by Number 15. That poor kid "falls in love" every two weeks. She's so vulnerable it's pathetic.

I know this letter is too long to print, but maybe if you will print a part of it, it will help open a few eyes. Thank you. — A Formerly Cool Cat With A Million Regrets

Dear Cat: Here's your letter — all of it. I hope the girls who see themselves in this column will face up to the truth. If you don't feel good about whatever it is that you're doing, it's wrong. Thanks for sharing.

Dear Ann Landers: Today my parents took my pet away because too many neighbors complained that he barked all the time. He also nipped a little kid but it was nothing serious.

The lady who complained the most lives next door. She should be the last one to complain about anything. She has a mentally retarded boy who is always walking around outside with most of his clothes off. Even in the winter. Last December he was out almost every day, in the snow, without shoes, no jacket or cap. Everyone keeps pulling his pants up and taking him home. Once when we had company he wandered into our living room without any pants at all.

There is nothing you can do about our dog now, Ann, but will you please tell us what we can do about this woman's son? — Spokesman For The Neighborhood

Dear Spokesman: The mother of that child has her hands full. I believe it would be an act of kindness if your mother had a chat with her and suggested that she keep the doors locked for the child's protection as well as out of consideration for the neighbors.

If the mother is not amenable to suggestion, your mom should call the local chapter for Retarded Children. Someone should intervene for the child's sake. That woman needs counseling.

More bills pre-filed in state legislature

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Majority rights would be given to 18-year-olds and women could work in mines under new bills filed for consideration in the 1974 legislative session.

Current state law prohibits women from working in mines. A 60-page bill filed Thursday would give 18-year-olds all the rights now enjoyed by 21-year-olds, including purchase and sale of liquor.

Other bills filed Thursday would:

— Set up a state Election Commission and reform the campaign spending laws.

— Allow annual publications of statute book supplements. They now are published every two years.

— Allow a $3,000 state income tax deduction for servicemen on active duty and allow a $1,500 deduction for retired military men.

— Require police board hearings before any policeman could be fired, reduced in rank, reprimanded or suspended.

— Repeal the one-half cent sales tax law put into effect last summer to help solve the financial problems of the Bi-State Bus System in St. Louis. The bill was offered by Sen. Edward Linehan, D-St. Louis.

— Add a judge to the 23rd Judicial District of Jefferson and Washington counties.

— Impose a $1,000 fine on corporations for failure to give the secretary of state a complete list of all stockholders within 15 days of a request for the list.

— Have the people vote on a constitutional amendment to make the residency period for voting be 30 instead of 60 days.

Information to be used in the social calendar must be turned into the women's editor at least four days in advance of the event. Only the organization's name, time and meeting place will be used.

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Diabetics should shed excess fat

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband, age 61, has been diagnosed as having a mild case of diabetes on the basis of a routine blood test sent through the hospital. There was no spill into the urine. He has omitted sugar from his diet for seven months and lost 15 pounds (down from 213 to 198 pounds). The doctor had prescribed two Orinase tablets a day, but he had such side effects of weakness and blurred vision that the doctor changed it to one tablet of DBITD with some slight effects similar to Orinase.

For three weeks he went without medicine, but the blood test then showed a level of 140, and the doctor asked him to go back to his medicine. We would like to know the following:

1. Is it possible to have diabetes without sugar in the urine?
2. How can we distinguish between too much sugar in the blood and too little?
3. What is normal blood sugar?
4. Is exercise helpful in the control of diabetes?

He would like to control his disease without the use of medicine, but he has heard it predisposed to heart attacks. I believe your column verified this.

DEAR READER — One of the best treatments for diabetics who are overweight is getting rid of any excess fat they have. That will also help in preventing heart disease, high blood pressure, and other problems. A number of people who have mild diabetes do fine after they have eliminated their excess pounds. And, I might add that the American Diabetic Assn. and other organizations have adopted the view that you can achieve as much in managing diabetes with diet alone as you can with the pills. BUT, that means you must follow the doctor's diet advice, which should include weight reduction when that is a problem.

(Newspaper Enterprise Association)

It is true that diabetes is associated with a higher incidence of heart disease. But, there have been some not so good reports about the use of oral medicine, too. That is one reason why many doctors now prefer to either use diet or, if that isn't enough, to use injectable insulin.

Normal blood sugar varies. A fasting level should be below 125. Occasional higher levels are seen with excitement and other problems. After eating or drinking sugar water it should not rise more than around 170 and should return to near the fasting level or not over 120 within about two hours. Many doctors are willing to let their patients live with a mild elevation of blood sugar if they follow diet programs.

Yes, you can have a high blood sugar without having sugar in the urine. Usually the blood sugar must be over 160 or 170 to spill into urine. And you cannot tell what the blood sugar level is. Your doctor will have to take a blood test to find out.

Exercise helps to use calories and will lower blood sugar. For mild diabetics it is helpful in controlling the situation. In those taking insulin, it may require them to adjust their dose if they increase their exercise level.

Student reports*Several industrial queries

As of last Saturday, the city had received 21 inquiries from industrial prospects since economic development director Bill Hall resigned Aug. 31. Mayor Jerry Jones said Thursday.

Jones said he had discussed these figures with the City Council, which is considering whether to replace Hall.

The mayor said representatives of eight of the 21 firms came to Sedalia for on-site inspection or possible plant locations. He said only one of the 21 would have required a supply of natural gas beyond that needed for heating.

Some Democratic councilmen have said they oppose hiring an economic development director because of the energy crisis.

The council Monday postponed a vote on hiring a director until Jan. 7, at the request of First Ward Councilman Don Broadus, who is chairman of the Industrial Development Board. Had the council voted Monday night, the split would have been 4 to 3 against. Councilman Raymond Bales of the Second Ward was absent.

Bales was one of five members of the industrial board that voted unanimously on Dec. 13 to recommend an out-of-town applicant for the job. Since then Bales has said he is uncertain as to how he will vote Jan. 7, and asked for guidance from interested citizens.

Relevant to the energy supply situation in Sedalia, Walter Savio, district manager of Missouri Public Service Co., restated his belief Thursday that there is enough natural gas to serve new industries.

"I personally feel we are in a better position to attract industry in this area than others that don't have an adequate (gas) supply," said Savio.

Sedalia with natural gas, has given no indication of cutbacks. Panhandle Eastern, on the other hand, which supplies MPSC customers to the north, has cut back and has added no new customers since December 1970, he said.

Savio pointed out that Cities Service Co., which supplies

Squirrel captured inside local home

A surprised squirrel, and an equally startled wife, greeted Jim Van Wagner, 1102 South Warren, when he made a special trip home Wednesday morning at the request of Mrs. Van Wagner.

The squirrel, it seems, slipped down Van Wagner's fireplace flue and quickly scurried to the front room, destined for points unknown.

"It's just lucky our dog didn't get wind of him," Van Wagner said. "That would have really been a scene!"

Ann Landers

Another writes about her virginity

Dear Ann Landers: Several months ago you asked girls who had given up their virginity to write and tell you how they felt about it. I couldn't bring myself to put my thoughts down on paper then, but I am ready now.

First, I'd like to say I didn't give in because "everybody was doing it." The girls I went to high school with weren't bragging — in fact, they were doing just the opposite. They were lying in their teeth, pretending they were "holdouts" when actually they were "put-outs."

I lost my virginity at 15 and now feel rotten about it. My "true love" dropped my after stringing me along for nearly four years. The relationship is over and the pain is gone, but I still feel used. Now I am 20 and hurting from a second affair.

When you "mess around," as we used to call it, you lose a lot of respect for yourself, and that hurts worse than anything. You try to hold on to the guy by catering to his wishes, but it never works. By the time you figure out that a relationship based strictly on sex is no good, you're a loser no matter how you look at it.

I'm sure a lot of girls are saying, "That's HER, not ME. It's cool to do it if you feel like it, and if you really care about the guy it's not cheap or wrong."

O.K., girls, keep kidding yourselves. My best friend operated along those lines for years and she was just ditched by Number 15. That poor kid "falls in love" every two weeks. She's so vulnerable it's pathetic.

I know this letter is too long to print, but maybe if you will print a part of it, it will help open a few eyes. Thank you. — Spokesman For The Neighborhood

A Formerly Cool Cat With A Million Regrets

Dear Cat: Here's your letter — all of it. I hope the girls who see themselves in this column will face up to the truth. If you don't feel good about whatever it is that you're doing, it's wrong. Thanks for sharing.

Dear Ann Landers: Today my parents took my pet away because too many neighbors complained that he barked all the time. He also nipped a little kid but it was nothing serious.

The lady who complained the most lives next door. She should be the last one to complain about anything. She has a mentally retarded boy who is always walking around outside with most of his clothes off. Even in the winter. Last December he was out almost every day, in the snow, without shoes, no jacket or cap. Everyone keeps pulling his pants up and taking him home. Once when we had company he wandered into our living room without any pants (down from 213 to 198 pounds).

The doctor had prescribed two Orinase tablets a day, but he had such side effects of weakness and blurred vision that the doctor changed it to one tablet of DBITD with some slight effects similar to Orinase.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My husband, age 61, has been diagnosed as having a mild case of diabetes on the basis of a routine blood test sent through the hospital. There was no spill into the urine. He has omitted sugar from his diet for seven months and lost 15 pounds (down from 213 to 198 pounds).

The doctor had prescribed two Orinase tablets a day, but he had such side effects of weakness and blurred vision that the doctor changed it to one tablet of DBITD with some slight effects similar to Orinase.

For three weeks he went without medicine, but the blood test then showed a level of 140, and the doctor asked him to go back to his medicine. We would like to know the following:

1. Is it possible to have diabetes without sugar in the urine?

2. How can we distinguish between too much sugar in the blood and too little?

3. What is normal blood sugar?

4. Is exercise helpful in the control of diabetes?

If the mother is not amenable to suggestion, your Mom should call the local chapter for Retarded Children. Someone should intervene for the child's sake. That woman needs counseling.

Diabetics should shed excess fat

have adopted the view that you can achieve as much in managing diabetes with diet alone as you can with the pills. BUT, that means you must follow the doctor's diet advice, which should include weight reduction when that is a problem.

It is true that diabetes is associated with a higher incidence of heart disease. But, there have been some not so good reports about the use of oral medicine, too. That is one reason why many doctors now prefer to either use diet or, if that isn't enough, to use injectable insulin.

Normal blood sugar varies. A fasting level should be below 125. Occasional higher levels are seen with excitement and other problems.

After eating or drinking sugar water it should not rise more than around 170 and should return to near the fasting level or not over 120 within about two hours. Many doctors are willing to let their patients live with a mild elevation of blood sugar if they follow diet programs.

Yes, you can have a high blood sugar without having sugar in the urine. Usually the blood sugar must be over 160 or 170 to spill into urine. And you cannot tell what the blood sugar level is. Your doctor will have to take a blood test to find out.

Exercise helps to use calories and will lower blood sugar. For mild diabetes it is helpful in preventing heart disease, high blood pressure, and other problems. A number of people who have mild diabetes do fine after they have eliminated their excess pounds. And, I might add that the American Diabetic Assn. and other organizations

Mideast optimism is hard to come by

The guns still roar on the Israeli-Syrian front a mere 25 miles from Damascus; Egyptian and Israeli troops stand poised to resume warfare along the Suez; the danger remains that fighting could get out of hand to the point of provoking conflict between the United States and the Soviet Union. Yet, the world gets the same old doubletalk from both sides.

WASHINGTON — Long overdue peace talks about the most explosive area of the world, the Middle East, are going to get underway today in Geneva — maybe.

That "maybe" is the worrisome key to everything, because it flows out of a quarter-century of attempted solutions and negotiations which drowned in a sea of promises broken by both the Arabs and Israelis.

Egypt's President Anwar Sadat suggests that his people will sit in the same conference room with the Israelis, but will not negotiate with them directly, a pathetic fallback to the traditional Arab posture of refusing to concede diplomatically the actual existence of Israel.

The Israeli first say they will negotiate with Egypt and Jordan, but not with Syria, which has refused to submit a list of Israeli prisoners of war. Then, apparently under the pressures of national elections that come up in just over a week, the Israelis say they will not even attend a peace conference at which the Syrians are present — unless the Syrians list the POWs.

Then, both sides make a huge fuss over the role of the United Nations, with the Arabs insisting on a strong UN presence, while the Israelis want the UN influence to be minimal.

If those hang-ups are resolved by the time you read this, you can almost bet that both sides will have dreamed up some new stumbling blocks. It was my sad fate to handle the Palestine refugee issue for the U.S. in the United Nations' 17th General Assembly. Indelible scars are on my mind, reminding me that here is a crisis in which the combatants don't trust anyone, and no one dares take the word of the combatants.

Henry Kissinger must find it wryly amusing on his current tour that in Beirut, Lebanon, angry Arabs greet him with signs saying: "Henry Kissinger today, Marshal Dayan tomorrow," while in Israel he is welcomed with signs saying "Kissinger abandoned Formosa; is Israel next?"

This Geneva Conference deals with some devilishly difficult issues, but at the same time the challenges before it are very simple.

The complications relate to issues like meeting the demands of the Palestinians, or reaching a solution as to how to take care of the refugees. Israel is resisting participation in the conference by the Palestinians, although it is hard to see any real peace negotiated without participation by the Palestinians.

The simple challenges are these:

✓ Will the Arabs accept the existence of a state of Israel occupying the territories granted to Israel at her birth?

✓ Can the Israelis be convinced to surrender Arab territories captured in 1973 and 1967 and withdraw within those 1948 boundaries?

Past bloody history suggests that neither side is really willing to accept both of these challenges. Deep emotions and profound fears make it almost impossible for the Arabs to say "Israel is here to stay," or for Israel to say, "However vulnerable the old boundaries may be, we'll withdraw to them in the hope of lasting peace."

The two things that offer more hope, now than has existed over 25 tragic years is that the Soviet Union seems willing to put pressure on the Arabs, especially the Syrians, and the United States, because of the Arab boycott of oil when we face an energy crisis, is willing to put unprecedented pressures on the Israelis. Progress at Geneva sufficient to induce the Arabs to resume shipping oil is critical to the economies of the U.S., Western Europe and Japan.

We can pray that in the Middle East Kissinger can achieve results which would be far more impressive even than the negotiations that got the U.S. out of Indochina combat and won him a share of the Nobel Peace Prize.

But let us not be overly optimistic. The late Ralph Bunche won the Nobel Peace Prize for his work in the Middle East a quarter-century ago—but the madness lingered on.

City hall art

The special commission appointed by Mayor Jerry Jones to recommend art acquisitions for the new Municipal Building has suggested a mural that would extend over the five large exterior panels that enclose the City Council chambers.

The council authorized $3,500 in local funds for the project, which the commission hopes can be matched by money from the National Endowment For the Arts. Next the commission says it intends to start the process that will lead to the selection of a professional artist to do the job.

For our money, we would like to see a mural intermingling several Sedalia themes, such as the cattle drives, the railroad, the birth of classical ragtime in the city, and so on. This would require a work that is largely representational, although not entirely so.

It would also require some research on the part of the artist, who would need a "feel" for Sedalia and its history. The art commission should take its time to insure that it gets the right person for the job.

We commend the commission for its ideas and efforts so far toward enhancing the appearance of the Municipal Building, and look forward to future developments.

Agnew and the law

Maryland is considering whether to disbar Spiro Agnew or simply suspend him from practicing law in the state for a specified time. The action stems from Agnew's resignation last August as vice president following his no-contest plea to a charge of tax evasion.

Agnew appeared Tuesday before a panel of three circuit court judges to plea for suspension. The Maryland Bar Association favors disbarment. The final decision will rest with the Maryland Court of Appeals, which will consider the lower panel's recommendation.

In view of what Agnew has already admitted concerning his conduct as a public official, in whom public trust was placed and then abused, we don't see how he could escape disbarment.

Having demonstrated his contempt for the law, why should he be allowed to continue to practice it?

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The government has wasted millions on sophisticated communications equipment that has failed, and the responsible officials have swept their mistakes under the secrecy stamp.

Last February, we broke through the tight security and exposed some of the costly communications goofs. These failings contributed to such disasters as the sinking of the spy ship Liberty by the Israelis in 1967 and the capture of the spy Pueblo by the North Koreans in 1968.

Now here is another fascinating installment. Like our first story, this gives away no legitimate secrets but merely exposes mistakes the government has tried to hide.

About eight years ago, for example, the Pentagon sent aloft a family of sturdy, if primitive, communications satellites. These provided the military with an alternate channel for vital messages.

Built into the satellite system was an "internal clock," which was set to silence the signals after more sophisticated satellites would be ready to replace the old models. The purpose of the silencing mechanism was to prevent excessive space static.

The new satellites, with their intricate workings, were scientific wonders. They were blasted, with pride and precision, into space. The only trouble was that they didn't work right.

One staggered in space like a holiday drunk while the Pentagon signalmen frantically tried to fix their antennae on it. Another lost its "transponder" signal, which is a little like a blind man losing his seeing-eye dog.

Desperately, the Pentagon hotshots aimed their radio beams back on the old Model T satellites, which may not have been fancy but which at least worked. Unhappily, the "internal clock" also worked and began cutting off the signals. The silencing mechanism, which should have been controlled from the ground, automatically caused the satellites to go mute.

Humiliated, the Pentagon people are now obliged to use NATO satellites until a third system is ready for launching. Our sources say the next satellites may also be

One-up-manship in cards

By DOUG KNEIBERT

I've been going through the cards I received this year, and would give myself about a .350 on the Christmas card one-upmanship scale.

The rules of this game are really very simple. Basically, the point is to get your Christmas cards to another person before he gets his to you. And it's not just how MANY you send, but to WHOM that counts.

First off, you disregard all family, relatives and friends. Everybody sends Christmas cards to these people, so for purposes of the game you don't score them.

This leaves merely casual acquaintances, obscure persons you met on your summer vacation, and those you bump into once a year at PTA meetings, drive-in concession stands and barber shops.

Get a Christmas card to them first, and you have: (1) made them think how thoughtful and considerate you are; (2) made them feel guilty for not thinking of you first. The holiday season is made up of such simple pleasures.

For example, the other day we received a card from Zip Code Area 731 signed Irv, Shirley, Roxanne and Eric. It threw me for a loop until my wife finally recalled that we had met a Shirley at a filling station in Rock City last summer on our vacation.

Score one for Shirley and Irv.

This made us all the more determined when we sat down to make out our list. We racked our brains for names and addresses.

After a few minutes I came up with Hobart and Glenda Finsterwald and their children, Erika and Renard, of Zumbro Falls, Minn. Hobart was the one who put his foot through a Japanese lantern at the fifteenth alumni reunion dance. I knew they wouldn't have any idea who we were, which is good for bonus points.

My wife then came up with Lornax and Sally Cruikshank of Pecos, N.Y. I drew a complete blank until she reminded me that she was the one who had helped me fix a flat on the New Jersey Turnpike two summers ago.

While it is still permissible to omit your last name when signing Christmas cards, since the Postal Service dropped city names on postmarks it is considered something of an unfair advantage. Remember that unless those you send cards to EVENTUALLY figure out who you are, the point of the whole exercise is wasted.

For example, I am still holding a Christmas card that neither one of us can get to first base with. In that kind of situation, you can only do one thing.

Gary, Sybil, Marney, Roger, Carouthers and Spot—wherever and wherever you are—come in free.

A glance revealed a large hawk circling overhead, who had dropped the bird more out of pity than carelessness.

The first pipeline in America was built of hollow logs in 1825 to supply natural gas to homes in Fredonia, N.Y. A five-mile line was constructed in 1865 to carry oil from wells near Titusville, Pa., to a railway.

scientific monstrosities which, out of sheer complexity, could easily go on the blink.

This fascination with delicate equipment also fouled up our secret communications during the Vietnam war. Security no longer restricts us from telling about the two Autodin, written-message communications systems, which the Pentagon established in Vietnam.

Each Autodin required total air conditioning, a dust-tight building and protection from both the power surges that burn out circuits and the power lapses that give its computers amnesia. These Autodin systems simply weren't designed for Vietnam's rugged climate and combat conditions.

Result: It took the Defense Department nine months to set them up and to get them working right, instead of the few hours that a proper strategic system should require. Although $5 million was spent on the delicate workings, failures sometimes blocked important CIA messages and the frustrated spies were compelled to use nonsecure telephone lines.

When U.S. forces withdrew from Vietnam, they didn't want to leave the two "autodinos" behind. They were both too complicated and too secret to be entrusted to the South Vietnamese. So the secret orders went out to cannibalize one for parts and to ship out the other intact.

This operation cost far more, say our sources, than the equipment is worth. "We'd have done better to blow them up," one Pentagon cost expert told my associate Les Whitten.

Here are other snarls that have developed in our secret communications:

✓ The foundations of one Autodin began to shake, reportedly caused by soft soil. These tiny tremors threw off the memory drum causing, as one report put it, "equipment failures."

✓ To transfer an Autovon voice system from France to a NATO neighbor cost a cool $1 million. When the French offered to buy some of the equipment left behind, our sources heard, an American officer was so infuriated over the miserly French bid that he beat the equipment to pieces with a fire ax.

✓ Another Autodin worked perfectly, but the foreign carpenters and workmen couldn't get the door to its building sealed against dust. A few specks got in, causing

South won in his own hand and led a club toward dummy's queen and right here is where Sammy separated the men from the boys. A lesser player would have let the club go whereupon there would have been no way left to beat one heart, but Sammy hopped up with his king and thought for a while.

Then he led the only card that would enable him to beat the contract. He played his low trump.

South's only choice was to cash his good spades and concede the last three tricks for down one.

If you don't think that Eric Murray and Sammy Kehely of Toronto are one of the best pairs in the world just look at this quiet defense. They were sort of fixed on the bidding.

North's pass of one diamond redoubled was for business. Eric sitting East didn't care. He would have made an overtrick if allowed to play there, but South ran to one heart. Sammy doubled and opened the four of diamonds.

South rose with dummy's ace; discarded a club and led

Steelers, Raiders in rematch Saturday

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

They're showing a replay in Cincinnati and a live one in Minnesota in the start of the National Football League playoffs Saturday.

The Pittsburgh Steelers and Oakland Raiders meet in a rematch of last year's American Conference divisional play-off.

The Washington Redskins challenge the Minnesota Vikings in a battle of high-powered National Conference teams.

Following the 1-2 punch Saturday, two more playoff games will be staged on Sunday — an AFC match between the Cincinnati Bengals and Miami Dolphins and an NFC struggle between the Los Angeles Rams and Dallas Cowboys.

If it's anything like last year, Pittsburgh and Oakland will be the most interesting of the four.

The Steelers defeated the Raiders last season 13-7 in a story book finish on Franco Harris' last-minute catch of a ball that was literally up for grabs.

This year, Oakland repeated as champion of the AFC's Western Division. The Steelers, who won the Central Division last season, will go into this big game as the AFC's Wild Card entry.

Enroute to their sixth divisional title in seven years, the Raiders registered a club record of the fewest points allowed (175) and even beat defending Super Bowl champion Miami along the way.

Southpaw quarterback Ken Stabler, who took over from Daryle Lamonica after the fourth game of the season, and set a club record 62.7 completion percentage. He led AFC passer ratings.

The Steelers have quite a passer themselves in Terry Bradshaw, who compiled an 8-1 record in the games he started this season. He was hurt toward the end of the year, and the slack was picked up by another good quarterback in the Steeler stable — Terry Hanraty.

Harris, who had a pair of 100-yard games, was again the Steelers rushing leader. He had 698 yards after missing two of his last six games.

The Redskins, who lost to Miami in last year's Super Bowl, will be making their third straight appearance in post-season competition since George Allen took over as coach in 1971.

Allen's "Win now" philosophy has produced some of the NFL's most dynamic teams. The Redskins are the NFC's defending champion but will enter this year's playoffs as a Wild Card team.

The game matches two NFC coaches with the best winning percentage among those in a head capacity more than one season. Allen has a 79-28-5 record (including Los Angeles) for a .728 percentage. Minnesota's Bud Grant is 65-30-3 for .679.

The Vikings, behind quarterback Fran Tarkenton's best season and a rugged defense, have turned around their fortunes in one year. Last season, the Vikings had a 7-7 year and this year, won the NFC's Central Division title with a 12-2 record.

The Cincinnati-Miami clash marks the first meeting of Paul Brown and Don Shula, one of his several former charges now coaching in the NFL. Shula, the Miami coach, came into the pros for Brown in Cleveland in the early 1950s. Since then, Brown moved to Cincinnati as head coach.

Then, Cronin dropped what may be a historic baseball bombshell, refusing to accept a contract signed by Williams with the Yankees last week. He ruled that Williams still is under contract for two more years with the A's, the club he quit immediately after it won the World Series championship in October.

Finley, who filed a federal court suit Tuesday to prevent Williams from joining the Yankees or any other baseball club, appeared to give the manager his blessings after the World Series. However, he didn't put anything into writing, as did the Yankees with Houk.

Finley later demanded player compensation for Williams. The Yankees, in turn, did the same with the Tigers. Finley reportedly has rejected New York offers of (1) veteran second baseman Horace Clarke and (2) $150,000 in cash and minor league players.

The Dolphins, who won 17 games enroute to the Super Bowl last season, weren't so perfect this year with two losses in 14 regular-season starts.

Bob Griese runs the Miami show with a trio of powerhouse runners — Larry Csonka (a 1,000-yarder for the third straight year), Mercury Morris and Jim Kiick.

The Dolphins will be making their fourth straight post-season appearance. Playoffs are no novelty for Brown, either. He got into plenty at Cleveland and this year, moved his Bengals to the AFC Central title.

Los Angeles, champions of the NFC West, is in the playoffs for the first time since 1969. Dallas, champion of the NFC East, has made playoff status for the eighth straight year.

"If the parties can get together, I would not stand in the way and Williams can go to the Yankees," Cronin said. "However, I have no idea what the clubs will do next. I also don't know if the Yankees or Williams or the Tigers have any other recourse."

A victory by the Steelers would be more dramatic because of the severe injury problems the team had, and Pittsburgh is probably the sentimental favorite of many, but sentiment doesn't win ball games.

So ... RAIDERS 20, STEELERS 17.

SUNDAY

Cincinnati (10-4) at Miami (12-2) — When this one is over, Paul Brown, the Cincinnati mentor who has forgotten more football than a lot of coaches ever learn, may regret that he taught one pupil so well.

That pupil, of course, is Don Shula, who played under Brown at Cleveland.

Even though Miami is the heaviest favorite in the weekend's four playoff games, the Bengals can't be too lightly regarded.

After all, Cincinnati, surprisingly, was No. 2 in offense in the AFC — compared to the Dolphins' No. 4 rating. And defensively, the Bengals wound up fifth, while Miami was second.

Let's say that Cincinnati will beat the spread, but not the Dolphins and call it ... DOLPHINS 23, CINCINNATI 18.

Los Angeles (12-2) at Dallas (10-4) — The oddsmakers like the Cowboys by about a field goal, give or take a half-point.

The Rams, however, should pull off the lone upset this weekend. Why? Well, there are a number of reasons, but the chief one is Chuck Knox, who worked miracles with the Rams in his first season as head coach.

And, after all, how can you not pick a team that finished first in rushing, total scoring, total offense and total defense. So ... RAMS 27, COWBOYS 21.

BOSTON (AP) — Charlie Finley, the controversial owner of the Oakland Athletics, held the trump hand and the New York Yankees were without a manager today while pondering their next move.

American League President Joe Cronin, sitting as judge and jury in his final days in office, formally ruled Thursday that Manager Dick Williams still is under contract with Finley and the A's.

Finley, speaking in Chicago, said he would have no comment on whether he was willing to renegotiate with the Yankees in regard to Williams.

He said he would not drop a federal court suit against Williams "until this entire matter is settled to our complete satisfaction."

Finley praised Cronin's decision, saying it would be the "beginning of an end to managers and coaches jumping contracts."

In a related case, however,

Santa Claus coming early for NFL teams

NEW YORK (AP) — Santa Claus will come early for four National Football League teams this weekend. He'll stuff their stockings with visions of Super Plums and dollars and dollars and dollars.

The jolly old fellow will pay a return visit to one team on Jan. 13 with the real thing — money. His largesse will even provide some dough for the losing team in the Super Bowl at Houston that Sunday afternoon.

The Washington Redskins, who got the loser's share in Super Bowl VII, collide with the Minnesota Vikings, who had the loser's share from Super Bowl IV, in the first of the four weekend playoff games.

SATURDAY

Pittsburgh (10-4) at Oakland (9-4-1) — Lightning, despite the saying, has been known to strike twice in the same place. But that doesn't mean that the Steelers can win in the same fluke manner that they beat Oakland in the 1972 playoffs.

If you've forgotten, Pittsburgh's Franco Harris made a shoestring catch of a deflected pass and scored the touchdown that gave the Steelers a 13-7 victory.

Oakland's defense, No. 1 in the American Conference, should be enough to counter Pittsburgh's third-ranked defense.

More important, the Raiders also finished first in offense. The Steelers were sixth, but that figure is misleading because No. 1 quarterback Terry Bradshaw was out part of the time.

A victory by the Steelers would be more dramatic because of the severe injury problems the team had, and Pittsburgh is probably the sentimental favorite of many, but sentiment doesn't win ball games.

The Tigers record now stands at 2-5. Shawnee Mission South ran its unbeaten streak to five.

We did a fair job offensively but just didn't hit the boards," Tiger coach Jim Dinsdale said. "We shot well from the field and from the free throw line, but we needed to improve our defense and rebounding."

The Tigers were outrebounded 44-29.

Slugfest results in Canuck defeat

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Philadelphia Flyers and Vancouver Canucks had just concluded a hockey game, but the conversation in the locker rooms resembled the banter following a boxing tournament.

But William T. deBarry, Columbia's executive vice president for academic affairs and provost, said, "There is no question that he (Campbell) will have the full and sustained support of the administration on all levels."

The only disquieting note came when Campbell was asked about a statement from Columbia's president, Dr. William J. McGill, issued when Navarro resigned, that "I know what it means for him to win, but frankly I am more interested in the character of the men we put forward in positions of leadership."

Earlier, Henri Richard and Tim Horton each reached NHL milestones.

Richard collected his 1,000 NHL point when he assisted on the Canadiens' second goal and

When order was restored, the officials counterbalanced by doling out 90 minutes in penalties and ejecting four players.

"We got a few goals and won a few fights," said Philadelphia Coach Fred Shero after the victory that pulled the Flyers into first place in the NHL West Division.

Power struggle growing inside Communist China

WASHINGTON (AP) — A military-civilian power struggle appears to be growing behind Communist China's placid facade, U.S. intelligence sources report.

Indications of increasing political tension in China have been threaded through reports reaching here over the past several months.

Much of this is believed to stem from the maneuvering of opposing factions for dominance in the event of Mao Tse-tung's death. Mao, the Chinese Communist Party chairman, is nearly 80.

Among its more recent moves, the radical wing of the party reportedly has been working to erode the political strength of the army, which controls many of the key posts in China's provinces.

As a counterweight to the army, radical leaders in Peking and Shanghai have been pushing for a major expansion of the civilian militia in China's cities, U.S. sources said.

Professional military officers are reported resisting any major strengthening of the urban militia, which could be a powerful weapon for the radical party element in a duel for control.

But the officers may be in a losing fight because the radicals are said to be backed by Mao and led by Mao's wife, Chiang Ching, among others.

By tradition, the People's Liberation Army (PLA) was kept out of Communist China's domestic politics until the cultural revolution of 1966. The party always believed that civilians should "rule the gun."

However, the Cultural Revolution, fostered by Mao to purge revisionist elements, spawned such chaos that the PLA was called on to restore order and its officers became dominant in most provincial committees.

Although the PLA's political position has slipped in the past few years, it remains strong.

The radicals, who oppose rapid liberalization in Chinese politics and society, are said to be taking aim at Premier Chou En-lai, a pragmatist and a moderate described as favoring faster change even if it departs somewhat from orthodoxy.

There was some belief that he might run into trouble from the radicals at the 10th party congress last summer, but he emerged without apparent loss.

Nixon papers are restricted despite tax return declaration

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon certified with his 1969 income tax return that he was giving vice presidential papers to the government free and clear with no restrictions. But the gift deed restricts who can see the documents and where they are to be deposited. The tax return declares: "Restrictions: None."

The deed says there are restrictions, although it adds that they are not intended to prevent the papers from being used for public purposes.

A White House spokesman Thursday repeated the position taken by Nixon lawyers that Internal Revenue Service auditors had seen the deed and were satisfied that the President's tax deductions for the gift was legitimate.

A Nixon accountant had said earlier that the provisions of the deed were "not considered a restriction. It does not defeat the purpose of the gift."

A White House lawyer said the restrictions apparently were not considered material at the time the return was prepared.

The papers remain sealed from public view under terms of the deed with which Nixon turned them over to the National Archives. The secrecy is not unusual in the case of papers of a public official.

Nixon has taken $482,000 in income tax deductions over the past four years for his gift of the papers.

A White House official restated restrictions on the papers earlier this year in a letter which described them as "President Nixon's private vice presidential papers."

That description is now disavowed by a White House spokesman, who said it apparently was written without proper staff work.

A Nixon accountant said limits on access, and a stipulation that the papers go ultimately to his presidential library, were not considered restrictions that would have barred the President's income tax deduction.

The Internal Revenue Code requires that all restrictions as to use and disposition of a gift be reported on the return of the taxpayer declaring it as a deduction.

An attachment to Nixon's 1969 federal income tax return describes the gift, says it was made on March 27 of that year, and states:

"Restrictions: none. The gift was free and clear with no rights remaining in the taxpayer."

The deed, dated a year before the tax return, declares that:

"While Nixon is President, no one can have access to the donated papers without his written permission. Nixon's deed also reserved him 'the right and power at any time during his lifetime to modify or revoke this restriction ...'"

If a Nixon library is established, the papers are to be transferred there as soon as practicable.

In denying The Associated Press access to some of the papers, on March 26, 1973, a White House aide wrote:

"As you know, the documents are from President Nixon's private vice presidential papers which he may make available at future date by depositing them in a presidential library...."

Nixon has made his tax returns public and has asked a congressional committee to determine whether he was entitled to the deduction for the papers gift.

The letter, signed by Richard C. Tufaro, then on the staff of the National Security Council, also said the decision against permitting access to the documents was not based on any need for security classification.

White House officials said the Tufaro letter does not represent current policy. "Apparently the letter was written before the proper staff work was done," Warren said.

Tufaro, now a New York lawyer, said the letter was cleared by the office of the White House counsel, then John W. Dean III.

Restrictions on access to the donated papers of prominent Americans are common, in some cases for security, in others for privacy. Many of the papers of past presidents remain sealed.

The Nixon gift is rendered more complex by the fact that he had the papers appraised and has been deducting their value from his income taxes.

The late President Lyndon B. Johnson apparently also claimed tax deductions for some papers he gave the government, and a number of other former government officials have done the same.

There are detailed restrictions on access to the Johnson papers also, but since his tax returns have never been disclosed it is not known how he described the gift to the Internal Revenue Service.

Nixon has made his tax returns public and has asked a congressional committee to determine whether he was entitled to the deduction for the papers gift.

The papers were transported to the National Archives on March 26 and 27, 1969. The deed was dated March 27, 1969 but was not turned over to the General Services Administration until April 10, 1970.

The deed provides for access to the papers by employees of the Archives for processing of the papers. It also states:

"None of the foregoing restrictions is intended to prevent the materials from being used exclusively for public purposes, and in no event shall any of the said restrictions be so construed."

While the attachment giving details of the papers gift was appended to Nixon's 1969 tax return, the deed itself was not.

White House officials say the deed was turned over to the Internal Revenue Service when Nixon's 1971 and 1972 returns were audited this year. But they said the IRS auditors apparently did not see the 1969 gift statement because returns for the year were not included in the audit.

The papers were valued by a private appraiser at $576,000, which Nixon began deducting from his taxable income in 1969. He has spread $482,019 of it over his taxes for the past four years, and still has $93,981 to deduct for this year.

McCommick said the district is hopeful of buying an extra 8,000 gallons of fuel from distributors outside Piedmont.

Christmas vacation begins early

PIEDMONT, Mo. (AP) — While one of the worst snowstorms in years this week forced the shutdown of many schools in eastern Missouri until after the New Year, the pupils in the rural school district of this community started their Christmas vacation early for another reason — there was no longer enough fuel to run the school buses.

Ronnie L. McCommick, superintendent of the far-flung district, said school was dismissed Monday, three days earlier than scheduled.

The district needed 1,250 gallons of fuel a week to run the buses. McCommick noted, but it has been able to obtain only 1,000 gallons since the local distributor had his monthly allocation cut by 27 per cent.

McCommick said the district is hopeful of buying an extra 8,000 gallons of fuel from distributors outside Piedmont.

United Nations and peace

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Folke Bernadotte, Ralph Bunche, Dag Hammarskjold, Gunnar Jarring and now Kurt Waldheim.

Over the years, these statesmen personalized the deep engagement of the United Nations in the Middle East. Now the question is being asked whether the world organization has been pushed aside in the peace-making process. And how much effect did it ever have there?

Secretary-General Waldheim, an Austrian, was the presiding officer for Friday's opening of the Geneva peace conference, but the United States and the Soviet Union are cochairmen of the parley.

The Soviet Union and the United States played the decisive roles in arranging the cease-fire that ended the October war. Makeup of the 10-nation U.N. peacekeeping force on the Suez front is also the product of negotiations led by the two superpowers.

The steps leading to Geneva demonstrated again that the United Nations is not a world government. It reacts to the demands of its member nations more often than the other way around.

The first Arab-Israeli war started when Israel proclaimed itself a nation on May 14, 1948. The Arabs attacked after rejecting a General Assembly vote to partition Palestine into Arab and Jewish states.

Swedish Count Bernadotte, U.N. mediator in a shaky cease-fire, was assassinated Sept. 17, 1948, in the Israeli sector of Jerusalem. Bunche, his American successor, won a Nobel Peace Prize arranging the 1949 armistice.

After the 1956 Suez War, the first U.N. international peace force helped stabilize the situation for more than a decade. But to get the force into Egypt, Secretary-General Hammarskjold, a Swede, had to promise Egypt he would withdraw it on demand.

The Egyptian demand came in May 1967. Secretary-General U Thant of Burma reluctantly ordered the pullout after a futile try at getting Israel to allow the force on its side of the truce line.

Then came the Six-Day War, with a new cease-fire once Israel had swept to the Suez Canal and occupied parts of Syria and Jordan.

The Security Council in November 1967 adopted Resolution 242, which remains the U.N. guideline on the Middle East. Vague enough to be acceptable to all sides, it urges a settlement based on recognition of Israel and Israeli withdrawal from occupied territory, but without specifying how far.

Jarring, the Swedish ambassador to Moscow, was named U.N. special representative to carry out the resolution. But it took still another war to bring the conflict to a formal peace conference.

And the United States and the Soviet Union, not the United Nations, arranged the conference.
